Pentagon revokes 9/11 officer's clearance

By Kimberly Hefling, Associated Press Writer | September 30, 2005

WASHINGTON —An officer who has claimed that a classified military unit identified four Sept. 11 hijackers before the 2001 attacks is facing Pentagon accusations of breaking numerous rules, charges his lawyer suggests are aimed at undermining his credibility.

The alleged infractions by Army Lt. Col. Anthony Shaffer, 42, include obtaining a service medal under false pretenses, improperly flashing military identification while drunk and stealing pens, according to military paperwork shown by his attorney to The Associated Press.

Shaffer was one of the first to publicly link Sept. 11 leader Mohamed Atta to the unit code-named Able Danger. Shaffer was one of five witnesses the Pentagon ordered not to appear Sept. 21 before the Senate Judiciary Committee to discuss the unit's findings.

The military revoked Shaffer's top security clearance this month, a day before he was supposed to testify to a congressional committee.

Mark Zaid, Shaffer's attorney, said the Pentagon started looking into Shaffer's security clearance about the time in 2003 he met in Afghanistan with staff members of the bipartisan commission that studied the Sept. 11 attacks and told them about Able Danger.

Zaid said he can't prove the Pentagon went after Shaffer because he's a whistleblower, but "all the timing associated with the clearance issue has been suspiciously coincidental."

Citing concerns with the privacy act, Cmdr. Terry Sutherland, a Defense Intelligence Agency spokesman, declined to release any information on Shaffer.

According to papers provided by Zaid, the Defense Intelligence Agency is questioning whether Shaffer deserved a Defense Meritorious Service Medal he was awarded. Shaffer, who is supported by a retired colonel who has praised his work, says those challenging the medal do not have firsthand knowledge of his actions.

Shaffer says he showed his government credentials during two incidents in 1990, when he was drunk, and 1996, when he was pulled over by police. The military says he misused his credentials, but Shaffer says he was not told he should not have used them. He also said he has joined Alcoholics Anonymous and has been sober for 13 years.

As for the pens and other office supplies taken, he blamed that on "youthful indiscretions" more than 20 years ago.

According to the paperwork, the alleged infractions against Shaffer also include:

- Falsely claiming $341.80 in mileage and tolls fees. He said he filed travel expenses based on what he was told by human resources staff.

- Obtaining $67.79 in personal cell phone charges. He said the amount was a legitimate expense accrued so he could forward calls.

- Going over his chain of command to do briefings. Shaffer said he was providing briefings to higher-ups on projects even his direct superiors did not know about, and he received superior review ratings for that time.

- Showing irresponsibility with $2,012 in credit card debt. He said he paid off the debt, and Zaid said DIA dropped the issue.

Shaffer, now a member of the Army Reserves, has been on administrative leave since March 2004. During the same time, he was promoted to lieutenant colonel on Oct. 1, 2004.

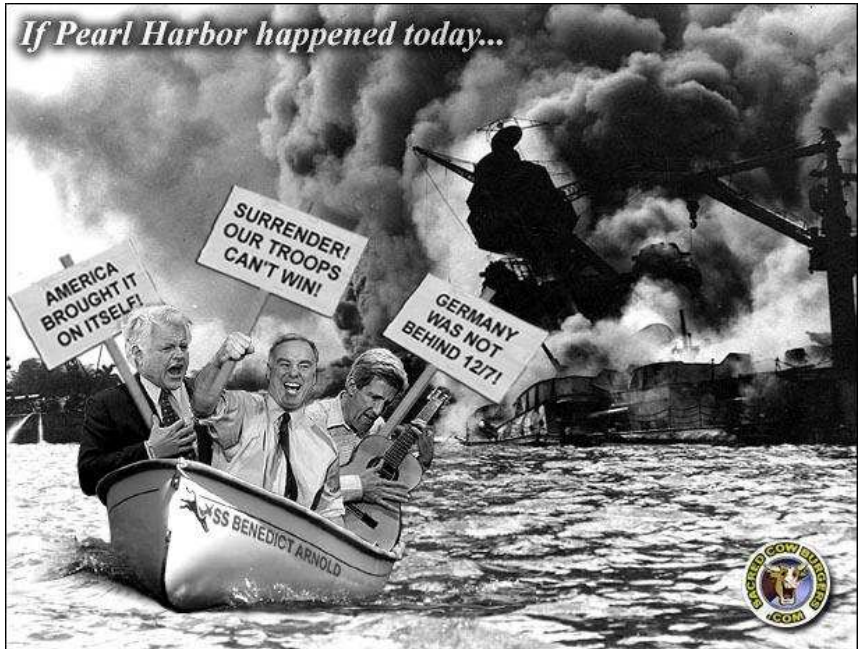

Shaffer has said he tried three times to meet with the FBI to convey the Able Danger unit's findings before Sept. 11, but was ordered not to by military attorneys.

Shaffer's assertions on Able Danger have been supported by Rep. Curt Weldon, R-Pa. If correct, they would change the timeline as to when authorities first learned of some of the Sept. 11 hijackers.

The Sept. 11 commission has dismissed the claims. The Pentagon has acknowledged some employees recall seeing an intelligence chart identifying Atta as a terrorist before the attacks, but said none have been able to find a copy of it. Editor's Note: Congressman Curt Weldon (R-7th District, PA) has been hammering to get something done about the cover-up. Able Danger. We easily foretold the compromises that would occur when politicians are put in charge of investigating their own corruption.

"Congressmen who willfully take actions during wartime that damage morale and undermine the military are saboteurs and should be arrested, exiled, or hanged."

PONDERING THE SOCIAL INFLUENCES OF THE NEW YEAR

It's just amazing. The Jews are coming out to protect the Gentiles' right to say Merry Christmas. One member of the Jewish pro-Christmas group is comedian Jackie Mason. He said even though the Jews are only two percent of the population they can still say Happy Hanukah. As Mr. Mason says, we're a pluralistic society that has open arms in welcoming diverse religious beliefs.

The social influences of the Anti-Christ Liberal Union (ACLU) has perverted an entire society. The ACLU has been the most instrumental in trying to make the Constitution something that it isn't; a living document. The liberals have a believe that the Constitution is a "living" and should adapt to various social climates throughout history, at least starting now. The words remain the words. The words do not change as society grows less respectful of each other.

The changes that we have seen in our society over the past couple of decades is rather frightening. We have seen many transition periods; the pride of serving the nation in the military dissolved through the legacy of the Clintons, the acceptance of gay life-styles was forced upon society and the education system teaches America's historical mistakes to help diminish any pride and loyalty to the Constitution. We are a nation of the pride-less.

Most of what ails us has come out of Hollywood. The movie called American Pie and TV shows like That 70s Show and Desperate Housewives are both demeaning and immoral. What we fail to discuss is that these movies and shows are frequently seen abroad and those watching them believe that it portrays life in America. Thankfully, on the horizon are cable company incentives to provide family-friendly shows and they need to regulate ads.

We are a nation of the pride-less.

Bart Stupak (D—Menominee)

Bart Stupak (D—Menominee), following along party-lines, voted against securing our borders. In a 239—182 vote, HR 4437 now moves onto the Senate. The Senate remains in limbo with the Patriot Act extension and has a Supreme Court judge to vote on.

One year into his new term, our illustrious representatives from the State of Michigan, Stupak, Stabenow and Levin, remain entrenched in partisan politics. Advocates of "getting along", these three have done nothing but obstruct and defend idioms.

There is a very strong sense, based on the preponderance of the evidence, that many of the archaic, out-of-touch and staunch partisans will be ousted in 2006. Unfortunately, we can't replace Levin until 2008, unless of course he dies in office.

FLASHBACK: DEM LEADER HARRY REID ALL SMILES AT PATRIOT ACT SIGNING -

THE DRUDGE REPORT has uncovered a photograph of President Bush signing the Patriot Act in the East Room of the White House on October 26, 2001. And standing over the President's shoulder with a smile on his face is Democratic Senate Minority Harry Reid (D-NV)! Reid is currently leading efforts in the Senate to block the renewal of the Patriot Act.

After Reid successfully prevented the Patriot Act's renewal late last week the Senator attended a Democrat political rally and proudly declared, "We killed the Patriot Act."

One Republican strategist familiar with the photo said, "Democrats think they can regain the majority? Not a chance if they continue to put politics above what's best for the country. Harry Reid is making a colossal miscalculation, but it's not the first time and thankfully for us, probably not the last."

President Bush Signs the Patriot Act—After four years to make corrections and ensure rights are protected, Congress now needs three months to do what they should have done over time.

MAJOR CONSTITUTIONAL VIOLATIONS PREVAIL IN WASHINGTON; WE'RE LOOKING FOR TRUTHFUL ANSWERS By J. Powers

How dare the Democrats even raise an eyebrow over the question of monitoring foreign communications. Many of them were in on it and were well briefed, including senators Levin and Reid. We know that the war on terror requires some very prudent and insightful programs to ensure our safety—that's a given. However, other matters have extend beyond the parameters of national security and the Democrats are at the center.

Hillary and Bill Clinton, made the antics of J. Edgar Hoover look like a playground conspiracy. They used the federal government, the IRS more specifically, to crawl up the hannies of their political foes. They had 900 FBI files in their possession for years. Vincent Foster, ready to roll over on the Clintons, was found dead of a "self-inflicted" gunshot wound. Clinton had given orders to allow spying on American citizens, not al Qaeda, but American citizens. They also blocked information sharing that was vital to national security.

Sandy Berger stole important documents that would have provided an enlightenment of the incompetent Clinton White House. Jamie Gorelick was placed on the 9–11 Commission and provided very critical interference in ensuring the facts of the Clinton White House and Able Danger didn't come to public light. Carl Levin and fellow Democrats are still sitting on the IRS investigation, have done nothing to oversee the proven compromise of our constitutional rights and remain visionless.

We want answers and we want them yesterday! If the Democrats have all of a sudden become advocates of our constitutional rights, then they first have to look at the past violations on their part, come clean with it and then regain some credibility so they can legitimately proclaim their advocacy on our part. Until then, we have no reason to respect, believe or even like Democrats. This really isn't partisan; the GOP has to answer the questions we have as well. ~J. Powers

THOSE DARN TEENAGERS

The teens of 2005 are making their mark every day, preparing themselves for adulthood. The pandemic of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) is alive and well. Their sexual relations have a hint of the Free Love society of the late 1960s and early 1970s with an added bonus of non-sexual relations popularized by Clinton. Oral gonorrhea and other oral STDs are just coincidental and have no direct link to non-sexual oral contact.

Binge drinking and excessive use of alcohol may be damaging brain cells, but the practice of drinking at a college-level in middle school just means the teenagers have made huge leaps in maturity. The young ladies walking into the local Super One and buying four limes in mid-December is usually just an indication all the young ladies were heading back to someone's home to do some baking in preparation of being a good parent that cooks well.

Illegal drug use is also at an all time high, even more than it was during the 1970s. The new teens are the grandchildren of those from the 1960s and 1970s. They're the second generation of the Free Love society.

An east-coast governor recently signed legislation that mandates steroid testing among middle and high school athletes.

Thank God, the teenagers aren't smoking as many cigarettes.

WHAT'S NEXT FOR IRAQ?

The war is over; Saddam is on trial, his boys are decomposing as we speak and Iraqi people participated in three major elections. The latest establishes their representative form of government; a Republic has been born!!! The Democrats are still trying to convince us we can't win and they want to do to the Iraqis what they had done to the Vietnamese.

Just as President Bush had said from the beginning, he would have our armed forces and allies provide a transitional security, train the Iraqis in military and law enforcement procedures and step-aside as Iraq becomes an independent country. But the Democrats aren't done with them yet; Levin and company want the Sunnis more involved.

The Sunnis have been fighting the transition tooth and nail since our brave-hearts entered Iraq. When the United States was created, if Levin were around back then, half of Congress would be appointed by the King of England. It was the old conservatives that didn't want to make waves between the New World and England; today it's the liberals.

So what's next for Iraq? Perhaps a civil war is looming on the horizon. The popularity among the controlling factions of various Muslim sects is a Totalitarian Theocracy. These same "religious" join hands with god-less communists. But, what lies ahead for the Iraqis will be what they are willing or unwilling to fight for on their own.

Merry Conspiracy By Nancy Levant

I've been thinking about the term "conspiracy theory." It carries negative connotations. So I thought I'd talk about conspiracy theories, their theorists, and why we are inundated with them this holiday season.

We know that our government is not our government anymore. We know that our Constitution is nothing more than paper, and we know that American history is bad for children. Why do we know this? Because our government is not a government, but is, in fact, a conspiracy. For instance, we thought, as per our Constitution, that we had built in checks and balances to trap governmental corruption - checks and balances like the House, Senate, and judges. We were wrong, because the House and Senate voted for so many Constitution-dicing acts that the Constitution, as it stands today, is practically an illegal document. And judges? That system's corruption goes so deep that that's another encyclopedia into itself.

Another fascinating aspect of being ruled by a conspiracy is the fact that our "elected" are not giving us much one-on-one time anymore. Instead, we are privy to televised debates, and only the ones they want us to hear. They are not giving many public speeches and appearances anymore - meaning in the public. No, I'd venture to say that our elected have become TV images vs. our representatives. They are interacting with us less and less. In fact, I think Adolf Hitler had more personal interaction with his people than all our politicians put together. Our politicians are televised and dictating. They are not interacting with or representing the will of the American people. And their make-up and hair stylists need to go back to cosmetology schools. Our elected are beginning to look very peculiar - maybe a little nervous, too.

Equally, I can hardly wait for campaign season. It will be very interesting to see the representatives of the American people begging for jobs after they willfully destroyed the Fourth Amendment, sold our jobs, and destroyed our economy. I can hardly wait. And I bet that 95% still have not read the entire language of the Patriot Act that just destroyed the privacy rights of every citizen in the United States of America. Not one of them read it the first time around. But then, of course, they weren't allowed to read it. And by blindly passing that Act, it also demonstrated exactly whom they were representing. It was not the American people. Otherwise, they would have demanded to read and debate its legality. Instead, they were representing other powers and, therefore, passed the full-blown destroyer of the Fourth Amendment. Conspiracy theory, you say? How about conspiracy "fact" and the elimination of privacy in the United States of America.

And speaking of television, did you ask for decadence, vice, and non-stop crime-time TV? Neither did I. Neither did my parents, grandparents, my children, or grandchildren. Did yours? And then suddenly, we are reviled in the world as a nation of immoral and decadent freaks. Now, let's think about this. Who owns big media? Who directs big media programming? Who decided that the American people wanted to watch crime, sex, and ignorance on television 365 days a year? And who decided to change what was supposed to be "entertainment" into vice? And who is supported by 24-hour a day channels? American aristocrats, foreign globalists, highly paid academic think tank prostitutes, and CEOs, that's who...

And while they butcher our Constitutional rights, is there not a connection to the non-stop scare tactics that television has been pouring into our psyches for the last decade (or three), coupled with the building of multiple homeland and paramilitary police forces, like Homeland Security, FEMA, C.O.P.S., ABCD and the COMPASS database? Do these things have nothing to do with each other, or is it all a conspiracy theory? How about conspiracy governance...

I've been driving the point home for a long time that you are asking for it when you allow aristocrats and their wealth into positions of governmental power. I've even said that, historically speaking and since the beginning of recorded human history, they have repeatedly committed the most heinous crimes against humanity, over and over again.

What is happening in the United States is, historically speaking, the oldest political scam in the world. Create fear, manufacture chaos, and swoop down and conquer. How many times do nations need to mindlessly suffer the ravages of the oldest regime game in the world?

Conspiracy theorists? No, conspiracy governance.

America, your government officials are destroying your government and, globally, freedom. They have also destroyed your innocence, your morality, and your courage. We, the people, have been steadfastly blamed for drugs, violence, carnage, unfairness, and the downfall of our culture. But who brought all the above into our nation? Who turned it into entertainment? Who terrorizes us, on a daily basis, with all means of media, governance, militarizing, terror TV shows, and the legislated slaughtering of all our freedoms? Who WOULD NOT stop in inflow of illegal drugs into our nation, and WILL NOT stop the inflow of illegal aliens? Conspiracy governance.

I'm fond of recalling a conversation between my Father and one of his friends. My Dad, who was a 3-pack a day smoker, simply quit smoking one day and never smoked again. One day, his friend asked him how he ever managed to quit smoking, and my Dad said, "Because I never knew I was addicted. Nobody ever told me that."

I suggest that this comment carries mammoth wisdom. Equally, I suggest that we, the people of the United States of America, need to remember who we are. We must not function as the foolish robots we are told we need be by wealthy elitists, who believe themselves to be humanity's governors. We come from the most humane system of government that ever existed. We lived better and had opportunities far greater than most people in all of human history. And we are now in daily observation of renegade aristocrats who are purposefully mutating us into the servants of a government of their invention.

With the passage of the upgraded Patriot Act and the destroying of your rights to privacy in America, I also suggest that you not be surprised when "conspiracy theorists," much like microbiologists, begin disappearing and their voices silenced. Dissension is being steadfastly and rapidly criminalized. So remember this, don't fall into the globalists' trap. Remember who you are and remember your nation, which was, though flawed, the greatest and kindest nation to its people. Our Republic freed slaves in record historical time. Our Republic gave rights and respect to women and children. Our Republic welcomed and mixed nationalities and cultures and belief systems, and thrived under the laws and Constitutional principles of freedom for all.

Don't let television tell you what is wrong with you, your children, and your nation. Don't allow aristocrats to define you and your reality. Don't let them tell you how sick you are and how they will fix everything. You know who you are, and you know that you require freedom to be who you are. We are a united people who love our freedom, because our nation and its Constitution allowed us to be individuals with differing opinions. Media divided us at the mandates of their owners, who are globalist fanciers and the elitist of the white, and predominantly foreign, elite.

I am proud to be a conspiracy theorist. I am proud to be a watchdog of a conspiracy government. Merry Christmas. I am praying for peace, truth, and a great awakening. I am praying for American people - every race, gender, and age, from every walk of life, to remember that, without freedom, our opinions and differences don't matter. Unity and freedom first - always freedom first. Love your country. Protect her.

MORE DOTS CONNECTED: AGENDA 21 V THE U. P.

On many mornings I wake up knowing that, while I was asleep, my mind has been mulling over all the eco-crap I've ingested. This morning was one of those times, and the first conscious thought I had was that the United Nations' Bio-reserve being developed in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan to buffer the UN's Biosphere at Isle Royale is actually the Michigan Technological University Bioreserve, which will eventually meld with the University of Michigan's UN Biosphere and reserve in the northern half of the Lower Peninsula.

Isle Royale is an island in Lake Superior and the National Park Service administers to it from headquarters in Houghton. Therefore, this legitimizes using Houghton and MTU as a hub for bioreserve building and as a safe harbor for the research and development, training, and information sharing that is to be done in a zone of international cooperation with all of the United Nations' multitudinous Bioreserve scattered throughout the globe.

Add to that the Keweenaw National Heritage Park, headquartered in Calumet, but spreading south to Hancock. This is also administered by the National Park Service, and it's manager and his wife, the Fiala's, both belong to the George Wright Society, an environmental group of considerable clout, but cloaked so that it's influence is seldom known by the average citizen. I believe Mrs. Fiala is the Secretary for the Geo. Wright Society. She's also involved with the Keweenaw Land Trust and most likely other environmental groups, as well. They came here from one of the western states where another Wildands Project Initiative, the Yellowstone to Yukon wildlands restoration (Y2Y), has been underway for years.

This subconscious connect the dots process that was going on as I was sleeping this morning was likely prompted by a press release I received yesterday that was issued by Governor Granholm. The release was related to a meeting scheduled for 10 a.m., January 24th at MTU. The purpose of the meeting is to hype Granholm's "21st Century Jobs Initiative" and "to help businesses understand the funding/application process" for the allocation of "nearly $400 million of the state's tobacco settlement revenue in 2006-07..." There is only one meeting in the U.P., and since Michigan Tech is not centrally located, as Northern Michigan University is, it struck me as odd that such a meeting would be held there.

Odd, that is, until my subconscious mind put two and two together. At one time MTU churned out mining and forestry engineers. This is no longer the case, and it appears that the university's focus is on environmental engineering and promoting those parts of the UN's Agenda 21 related to conservation of natural resources and sustainable living conditions where managed human use will be allowed for researchers and developers, as well as "trainers", i.e., a university campus and surrounding area where such people will be allowed to live.

One woman, Merle Kindred, has already started an initiative for a sustainable eco-village to be built in Hancock, Houghton's sister city just across the Portage Canal lift bridge. Ms. Kindred, a widow woman and peace activist, is very much involved in MTU, the eco-feminism movement, and heads up Habitat for Humanity in Houghton. Her model, energy efficient Hancock home, apparently built with a tidy grant, was designed by her now deceased husband, who owned an architecture firm elsewhere. I believe Ms. Kindred is still involved with a partner in the firm. She, like at least one other ecowoman in the Keweenaw, has shown up in our community as an ancestor of deceased area settlers. (another rabid eco-woman, who came to Calumet several years ago, hovers over genealogy search sites on the Web, looking for ancestors in this area, but I won't go into what I suspect this is all about now)

The "21st Century Jobs Initiative" money carrot now being dangled before salivating entities in Houghton and elsewhere downstate, is to be used "to support commercialization, capital investment and commercial lending efforts in the areas of life sciences, alternative energy, advanced manufacturing and homeland security.

In my humble opinion, it's a money scheme to legally fund those "stakeholders" already in on the ground floor of the United Nation's Agenda 21-Sustainable Development scam that's being pulled on unsuspecting local citizens who haven't a clue about the take over of America by the One World Order's Fascist warlords. Wind energy is, I know, now being explored at MTU, but this is nothing new, as mention has been made of it on several older Website pages having to do with the early stages of reserve building in the Keweenaw.

It's also my humble opinion that certain members of the Houghton community where MTU is located, as well as surrounding influential community members, have been anticipating the future, as though looking through a crystal ball. I believe several of these locally "respected" ladies and gentlemen have been privy to prior information, and have used it to feather their financial nest, all in the name of community progress, of course. By so doing, they've already taken advantage of many money perks, while sucking local tax payers into wearing blinders when it comes to knowing what's really going on behind the scenes.

Community leaders simply can't continue to allow taking property off the local tax roll, while expecting to have revenue for infrastructure and the necessary protection that police and fire department forces provide. However, by providing funding for "Homeland Security" by way of grant money, this problem might possibly be taken care of, especially when downsizing a community by exploiting those citizens already struggling to survive financially and forcing them to seek greener riverwalk and bicycle path pastures elsewhere.

While I could name names of those whom I suspect to be milking the eco-gravy train in the Houghton/Hancock area, I won't. A few of these people with their hand in the government's environmental honey pot are more than passing acquaintances, and I'm faced now with confronting them or continuing to look the other way while gathering more evidence of their duplicity. Some others are members of what's known locally as the "Copper Country Mafia" and "Copper Country Cartel", both political forces to be reckoned with. These men have garnered influence because of lofty positions within the community, old family money, connections to old family moneyed people, or any combination of these things. They infiltrate many political hotspots within the local community and, no doubt, influence local chambers of commerce, city halls, and the Houghton County Courthouse.

I see a trend to financial backing of pre-planned activity that will progressively facilitate the Isle Royale-MTU Bioreserve building. It now appears that this will continue to be done through Granholm's "Jobs for the 21st Century", as well as through the Natural Resources Trust Fund Board's grants program, which selectively chooses who will get the well stuffed financial carrot. I believe this is being done, for the most part, without fairness of selection, but is predetermined by the willingness of significant others to cooperate and/or by the pliability of those community members being socially engineered to "preserve" their natural heritage through the "unsustainable" development fear factor, i.e. subdividing land for massive housing development.

Those struggling businesses, long entrenched in our local communities, will not, I believe, receive equal scrutiny when these new grants are doled out. I firmly believe this is a pre-planned ruse to facilitate the facilitators.

As each day passes, I become more concerned and more alarmed, but also find myself with very few allies who truly realize what's afoot here in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. Thank you for being one of those allies. ~Cj

IMPEACH PRESIDENT BUSH; A DNC CHRISTMAS WISH

Washington, D. C. has become the most amusing circle jerk to come forth in America in years. Although we were quite amused by the hippies and then the yuppies, today's conuppies (congress-puppies) have to take the cake for their transparent delusions of grandeur. To add to your amusement, do yourself a favor, google search: "Impeach Bush". There were 2 million hits on the search at last count and most of them have been wanting impeachment since President Bush was declared the winner in Florida back in 2000.

The Democrats have offered nothing in the way of leadership in the United States and in fact, we're still waiting for John Kerry's big "Plan". They are all so full of themselves (crap), that anyone with a hint of common sense or mental wellness, realizes that the Democrats have done more to destroy the nation than any type of external force. They have no sense of loyalty or patriotism; missing the boat on Americanism.

The wish list for the Democrats would be the initiation of an impeachment proceeding against President Bush. What is unfortunate, their first witness would have to be their own Jimmy Carter, who used the same spying techniques during the hostage dilemma. The next living witness would be Bill Clinton, who used the techniques to spy on the UN and political opponents. Clinton used his powers out of sheer paranoia. Clintons will also have to explain why the IRS was used to violate the rights of political adversaries.

While we're at it, each member of the 9-11 Commission, Janet Reno, Madelyn Albright and the thief, Sandy Berger, need to be called in as witnesses. Next, every member of the Senate Intelligence Committee needs to be called in to testify as well; what they knew and when they knew it is just the beginning. We need to know why those in Congress failed us.

The entire impeachment proceeding will cause a problem, but in some ways may be a blessing. It will essentially strap-down Congress, which is good, in the hearings and disqualify a large portion of the Senate from any vote for conviction because some of them may be indicted.

The call for the impeachment of President Bush should really be second in-line, right after the impeachment of five U. S. Supreme Court justices. [Based on their eminent domain ruling; which is an obvious violation of our constitutional rights and truly affects many US citizens.]

Bill Clinton lied to the people and while under oath he "misled" the court. The Democrats came out in droves to defend Clinton and said his personal sex life was none of our business. Leaving semen stains on the oval office carpet's presidential seal should have no bearing on Clinton. In fact, he helped promote oral non-sex among teens.

The real problem with those who darken the halls of Congress is not the individual selected by their constituents to serve, it's the archaic, irresponsible and unaccountable entity. Someone needs to create an orientation for each one of them every two years that includes a review of the US Constitution.

Government is supposed to be limited to the health, safety and welfare of the people; protecting worms, wolves and toads is not part of that definition. Those in government are also responsible for upholding and enforcing the Constitution; not re-writing it or invoking its meaning whenever it's a matter of convenience.

Where we are in American history and all the deaths that have been caused by an incompetent playboy in the White House, really goes back onto the shoulders of one man; spoiler Ross Perot.

We, the electorate, need to start firing our representatives and hire those that are more capable.
