DEM DARN DEMS BY J. POWERS

<http://www.clintonhouse.com/>

Ok, we admit we just couldn't resist using the above logo from a fine hunting establishment in Clinton, South Carolina to help us direct your attention to the hypocrisy among the liberals. We hope our readers picked up on our continued iteration that whenever a liberal demeans, blames or accuses, they just need to hold up a mirror to learn who they are really talking about. During a celebration of an American hero's birthday, Martin Luther King Day, Hillary Clinton stated that the GOP Congress is run like a plantation where dissenting voices are squelched and President Bush will go down in history as one of America's worst presidents.

We realize that President Bush has three years remaining in his presidency and he could still potentially screw up, even worse than Bill Clinton. But, as of today, it is clear that "W" will go down in history as one of the top five greatest presidents in American history. We only need to look at what he had inherited because of the highly incompetent Clintonistas.

Hillary's remarks gave a little boost of hope for those of us out here who have thought all this time that the members of the GOP Congress were no more than weak-kneed, neutered lap-dog consensus builders. Shame on us.

Next we have the ethically-challenged Edward "Ted" Kennedy of Chappaquiddick fame. While grilling US Supreme Court nominee Samuel Alito, Kennedy made some wild accusations of Alito's membership in an all male alumni club at Princeton University. Judge Alito may have paid his dues to the group as many new graduates do, but he wasn't an active member in the group as far as he recalls and as far as we here at the YS can tell. However, Teddy has been a member of the Owl Club of Harvard University. Even though the club was kicked off campus more than 20 years ago because they discriminated against women, Teddy remained a member in good standing, until he was found out by the good watchful eyes of NewsMax.com and all those out there in blog-land.

Finally, out of 19,928 votes in an on-line poll, 18,596 of those voting on the WDSU Television web site thought the remarks by Mayor Ray Nagin were inappropriate. During another liberal Martin Luther King Day speech, Nagin stated that the City of New Orleans will be chocolate again. In a usual back-pedal, Nagin later suggested that he meant that it would include white milk to make a delicious drink. The election for a new mayor will be held April 22. With all that we know about liberals, it becomes a major curiosity why any one but the most mentally challenged would vote for these people. What is most disturbing, nearly 49% of Americans qualify as being mentally-challenged. ~ J. Powers

Water, Water Everywhere, But Not A Drop Will Be Free By Maxine Adams

The handwriting has been on the wall for years and the writing is becoming clearer. We're all soon going to be buying the new "blue gold" from corporations who are using 90% of the water in world-wide manufacturing industries. The other 10% will be for sale to those who can afford it. If you're surprised at this revelation, you join many others who haven't realized this has been in the works for decades.

Corporations want to own all of the fresh water on the planet and work out an equalized distribution system from areas of plenty to areas of need, with emphasis on corporate profits all the way around. It's another part of the "global family" socialization. Along with every other resource, it will be, and is now, "protected" by a ton of rules, regulations and laws for the good of Corporate-Global in the name of environmental expediency. Corporate America is being phased out.

Granted, fresh water is a finite resource, but the only ones who will be enjoying it will be those who can afford it. The rest of us will be drinking from puddles and makeshift "rain catchers". If you're reading this, you have a computer. Go on line and find out what the water management plan in your state is. You will likely be very surprised!

This falls nicely into the eco-village solution as to what should be done with all those human beings who are cluttering up the planet. The core areas and buffer zones are just one more way to control our water along with all other natural resources.

The environmental groups yell loudly that they don't want the corporations to make water a commodity, but then the groups say "thank you" ever so quietly for the billions of dollars they amass from these same money sources to buy up more land to "protect" with their partners.

In turn, they sell some of the land for "cluster villages" for all of us to live in. Since it's common knowledge that none of us really own our land, it doesn't take a mental giant to figure out that the land with less worth will be "given", generously of course, for the housing of some corporate village for employees; villages reminiscent of the look-alike company owned houses in old mining towns.

There is no country on this planet that is a true democracy. All countries are beholden to money lenders backed by giant international corporations. Corporations are throwing out money by the billions to help underling and naïve environmental groups "protect" more and more of our land and resources, including water. Hopefully, those misguided people are unaware they're being used by those further on up the environmental group pecking order to further a larger agenda. The governments of each country, however, are a different story - they know exactly what they're doing and why.

Corporations now control our electricity, our fuel, our minerals, water, and forests all over the planet, as well as the food we eat. Through partnerships with the environmental groups and the government, not even our homes are safe.

Soon to follow will be managed health care, control over our personal habits, and even the number of children we will be "permitted" to have. Even sooner will be gun control. Without abundant wild game, there'll be no need for weapons. Besides that, it's for the peace of the planet, so how about trading that useless gun in for a few gallons of fresh clean water?

The Supreme Court recently upheld the right to euthanasia in Oregon, and it will rapidly spread to other states and throughout the planet, as a way to control medical costs and population.

There is even a crumb to throw to the people of various religions; combine them all into one religion that everyone will be "allowed" to believe in. By using the argument that since all agree there is only one God, by whatever name in each religion, it should not be a difficult transition for all the believers to make. The leaders of the planet will let us know what we may "choose" to believe and they will determine how and when we worship their god. Since "Creationism" is to be whispered in the closet, perhaps Pan, the Greek god of nature and wildlife, will be what is chosen.

Our children's school curriculum is already being adulterated through the use of "global guidelines". With the help of the ACLU, our parental rights are dwindling a bit more everyday. Even the concept of a "traditional family" is changing.

The advantage to that, you ask? The less cohesiveness in families, church and social groups, and the more distrust implanted, the easier humans are to manage. Hence, the lucrative neighborhood watch program where you can turn in your neighbor for an infraction of some minor new law or rule and get paid for it, perhaps in the future with water.

If anyone actually believes that the Clinton Global Initiative, the Millennium Project, and Agenda 21 will make this a kinder, more wonderful little ball to live on, they obviously haven't been listening to even the sketchy information given on the evening news.

The thousands of alphabet soup participants have such conflicting rules and regulations that it's hard even to keep track of them all. They breed like rabbits and are so intertwined that it's hard to tell whom they are and what alliances they've formed. The only thing they have in common is that each thread eventually always winds its way back to the United Nations, i.e. the Clinton Global Initiative and the World Trade Organization.

Where will this end? We all know, but are afraid to admit it, aren't we? Sure hope my neighbor in the rabbit warren that we'll all eventually be living in is a pleasant one! Sure hope the work that I'm assigned to do after the results of my aptitude test has been evaluated is something I want to do.

Most of all, I hope I'm not alive to see all of these things come true, but I'm afraid that by 2015 our lives are all going to be drastically changed. So raise that nice cold icy glass of water in a toast to the future! And, while you can, pray to the God of your choice for sanity to return to this little ball that's still whirling around the sun. ~ M. Adams

Roe Babies And Reagan Babies By Hans Zeiger, January 23, 2006

The rising generation of Americans has been shaped profoundly by two events that have anniversaries this week. The first event was the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Roe v. Wade 34 years ago. The second event was the inauguration of Ronald Reagan 25 years ago.

Because of the first event, one fourth of our generation is no longer alive. Roe Babies, 45 million of them since 1973, are missing.

But there are some positive signs on the cultural horizon. In recent years, public opinion regarding abortion has continually shifted toward the pro-life position. The number of Americans calling themselves pro-choice has declined by 10 points since 1995, while the number of Americans calling themselves pro-life has increased 16 points. According to a Gallup poll, a decade ago, 56 percent of Americans considered themselves pro-choice and 33 percent said they were pro-life. Today, according to a Zogby poll, 49 percent of Americans say they are pro-life, compared to 46 percent who say they are pro-choice.<sup>12</sup>

The most important reason for this shift is the survivors of abortion. Reagan Babies, born between 1981 and 1989, number about 30 million. Reagan Babies are presently in high school, college, on the frontlines in Iraq and Afghanistan, and emerging in the workplace. A growing collection of evidence indicates that Reagan Babies are more conservative than our parents. This is especially evident in the issue of abortion.

First, Reagan Babies are the most pro-life group in the nation. Gallup found that the highest support for restrictions on abortion was held among eighteen-to-twenty-nine-year-olds. According to a 2003 Gallup poll, 32 percent of thirteen-to-seventeen-year-olds are in favor of a complete legal ban on abortion, compared to only 26 percent of adults. Teens who attend church were more likely than those who do not to support an abortion ban, at 40 percent compared to 26 percent. Seventy-two percent of teenagers consider abortion morally wrong.

A Pace University/Rock the Vote survey of new voters taken before the 2004 election revealed that 54 percent were pro-life (believing that "all abortions should be made illegal" or "abortion should be legal only in the most extreme cases, such as to save the life of the mother, incest, or rape"), compared to only 44 percent who were pro-abortion. An amazing 61 percent of Latino and 59 percent of black first-time voters were pro-life. Among first-time voters, 52 percent of self-identified moderates were pro-life and 45 percent were pro-abortion.

And a 2004 Zogby poll shows that 60 percent of eighteen-to-twenty-nine-year-olds support complete restriction of abortion or minimal exceptions for the life of the mother, rape, or incest.

Second, the pro-abortion constituency is aging rapidly. A comparison of membership lists between Planned Parenthood and the National Right to Life Federation reveals that the average pro-abortion activist is ten years older than the average pro-life activist. The face of the abortion industry in the twenty-first century is the rapidly aging "liberated" radical.

Reagan Babies don't see abortion as liberation. "When I was their age, I thought abortion meant liberation for women," boomer ex-radical feminist Frederica Mathewes-Green wrote. "For them, abortion means violence against children. The meaning of abortion is changing, and as it does, minds change as well. It's not surprising that this change would begin with the young. After all, it is their generation that is under attack: anyone under the age of twenty-eight could have been killed this way. A fourth of their generation was." So it's not just another political issue for Reagan Babies; it is a matter of life and death. Sarah McKalips of the pro-life group Rock for Life says that youth "don't see abortion as just a women's rights issue, they also see it as a human rights issue."

Many of the faces I saw when I went to the annual March for Life in the nation's capital a couple years ago were young and vibrant. Young marchers wore T-shirts printed by Rock for Life that read, "You will not silence my message. You will not mock my God. You will stop killing my generation."

Reagan Babies are standing up for Roe Babies. Slowly, young Americans are helping to rebuild a culture of life. Doing so means more than merely overturning Roe v. Wade—it means that hearts and minds must be changed. Soon, we must pray, they will stop killing our generation.

What's the Answer? Unite for America

By Nancy Levant

The problem with being an ignorant voter is that you reap what you sow. American people, who have stood arrogantly and religiously behind televised platforms, while never once following, reading, and comprehending bills and legislation in Congress, are suddenly saying to themselves, "Oh, sh**!" Well, no sh**, Sherlocks...

We were divided, by our television mentalities, into red and blue camps. We, as a united people, were aborted, so to speak, and cleverly so. It became far more important to be a "conservative" or a "liberal" than to know the facts and power of our division. And as we continued to be ignorant people, our conservative and liberal leadership, the ones we elected in droves, changed our nation into their nation, for our leadership is, and for decades has been, a hybrid Socialist-Communist group who is fully, completely dedicated to the United Nations, the World Bank, the World Trade Organization, or, in other words, a one-world government where the rich rule humanity. If you are a red or a blue, you, too, are a global-Socialist. The condition of your country and the result of your vote is proof positive.

And now, the sleepy masses are having a tough time sleeping. Their nation is starting to scare them. Their elected, as so aptly demonstrated any day or night of the week on C-SPAN, are very creepy aristocrats – very creepy. I've said many times that they are fascinating to watch, and you will notice the pat and standard and incessant dribble – the non-stop dribble, which never, ever, addresses Socialist globalism, but only "security," which, in absolute truth and fact, means their security.

Between 9-11, the set up of the Martial Law/paramilitary system, non-stop hiding of legislation that is chipping away at our Constitution, our land, and all other rights; judicial hocus pocus, implementation of the NGO/partnership/stakeholding bureaucracy, which is PERMANENTLY eliminating local governments (that means village, burg, town, city, and county government), and replacing them with U.N.-defined "regions" and their appointed vs. elected NGO leadership, AND a thousand other points of global light, don't think for one moment that you, yourselves, are morally superior in any conservative or liberal belief systems. You are all fools. We are all fools. We threw out the baby, which was freedom, with profound arrogance and pride.

And now I would like to address Christianity in America. If I hear one more Christian stating that he or she is thrilled with the "end-time" scenario in America, I think I will scream. If Christians are going to insist upon acting like religious radicals, mandating who and what is good and evil, while sitting back and watching the kindest, most successful political system in the history of humankind be, once again, destroyed by aristocrats, greed, and power-mongering, then don't write to me about "the rapture" while you allow your churches to be faith-based and "partnered" to geo-political money and mandates. If you believe in unalienable rights, friggin' fight for them! I am sick to death of religious radicalism. I can't remember a time in my life or in history when it wasn't a global monstrosity and bloodbath. Enough with the arrogance! God does not need screaming me-me's. If you believe in Christianity, serve humanity. And for that matter, and no matter to which religion you prescribe, serve humanity and humble yourselves if you want a religious leg to stand on!

Finally, and having considered arrogance in this article, please let us ask what we can do in spite of ourselves. The question on everyone's mind is, "What do we do now that we see what we have done (and not done)?" We now realize that what we face is way, way beyond monumental, for we realize that the future, and what may be the immediate future, is bitterly and terrifyingly grim. And my countrymen, there is only one answer.

Red and blue, Black and White and Native and Latino and Asian, young and old alike – every American citizen from every walk of life must realize that freedom comes first. It trumps every, single political hot-potato issue, every single "security" development, and every individual political, social, and religious opinion. If you don't have freedom, opinion and individual belief is illegal. And aristocrats make your freedom illegal.

You will be told, in no uncertain terms, what your opinions will be. This is exactly what is happening to every single American child in the American public school system today. They are being drilled with new and mandated opinions – as per the mandates of the United Nations, its Outcome-Based Education, its School-To-Work Socialist-corporate mission, and its Socialist-Communist teachers unions. The new and enslaved citizen worker is upon us, and they are our children – the ones who will never know opinion or freedom.

Unite in mass – every American citizen – every single one of us – together and absolutely, steadfastly, indivisible. Get off of the red and blue grid and refuse its power. For all of you who want to know what to do, unite behind freedom, liberty, and justice for all. For if we don't unite in mass, all of our opinions will die terrible and bitter deaths. Everything that you personally believe in will be yanked from you – everything.

And if you still believe that "security" is the driving factor of our leadership, and you still believe that 9-11 is the reason for our nation's sweeping "changes," than you have succumbed to the oldest indoctrination scam in the book – create fear, implant new power. Systematically, another aristocracy is taking down another nation. It's the oldest political trick in history, and this time, that nation is ours.

In all of documented human history, the lesson that mankind has steadfastly failed to learn is that you cannot allow aristocrats and wealth to rule over mankind. Freedom is taken, first and foremost, and oppressive rule by the few always becomes dictatorial and brutal – ALWAYS.

The world is now fully under the dictates of wealthy aristocrats, their financial systems, their corporations and bureaucracies, and their academic institutions. Unbelievably so, we have allowed them powers unimaginable. We have looked away while they abused those powers and systematically removed ours. It's time to unite. Together, and in one voice, we must tell them that this nation is OURS. The continued public support of freedom's suicide must stop else we WILL reap what was so mindlessly sown. We must become Americans for the survival of America.

Furthermore, American people must understand that freedom and democracy are two very different things, which is why our nation was set up as a Republic and, specifically, not a democracy. Study up! And one last crumb for thought – America, as a nation, is not in this battle alone. People in all nations are facing the exact same globalization power crisis. We must support the freedom efforts of all people in all nations, and the DOES NOT MEAN that they have to think or believe as we believe! Human beings, and not just American people, have the right to self-determination. We are all in this together, and our power is in tremendous numbers. And on an endnote, buy gold and silver. Your money is not money. ~ Nancy

Michigan's "Eco-Green" State Forest – Theirs or Ours? By C. J. Williams

"Forest certification is a seal of approval for environmentally responsible wood and paper products," said Governor Granholm in a January 12th press release.

"Third-party forest certification is critical for those companies that want to ensure that the paper and wood products they purchase and use are legally harvested from well-managed forests," said DNR Director Rebecca Humphries.

"Today marks an historic milestone in Michigan's forest management history," said Granholm. "Dual certification affirms that our state-owned forests are managed in a healthy, sustainable way."

So what were these two empowered females blathering about? Well, you're about to find out! But, please bear in mind that state government, including the governor, are supposed to serve state citizens; we employ them by voting and we fuel our State agencies, their personnel and programs, with our tax dollars, sales tax, permit fees, park entrance fees, license fees and a whole host of other pocket-emptying schemes.

We do not employ those who work for us to also work for global citizens, all under the oppressive thumb of UN treaties and programs that have been systematically degrading and destroying America's Constitution and our inherent right to individual ownership, as state and national citizens.

If those, whom we employ as state servants, don't like this fact, they need to dial 1-800-Leave-the-USA and take their Socialistic, "for the common good", conceptual collectivism with them when they go!

We, my friends, are the State and our forests are now certified according to two standards, which require them to be managed in such a parsimonious way that they, and all that dwells within, will sustain all the world's people for a minimum of one hundred years.

As faithful readers of this column may well guess, the Nature Conservancy has played a part in staging this part of the Wildlands Project scenario, which is nothing more than a ruse to control the world's forests through the machinations of the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) and the Sustainable Forest Initiative (SFI). Half, 50%, of Michigan is forestland, and the globalizers want it all.

Both the FSC and SFI require complying with specific mandates for "sustainable management" in order for Michigan to market "green" wood and "green" forest products in America and overseas. As with most eco-language, the word "sustainable" is deceptive; what it actually means is that our resources will be managed so only the barest minimum will be taken for our personal needs. No more Charmin or Kleenex for us; it's back to corn husks and a looking glass arm for the proletariat, but enough timbering will be allowed to provide aloe soaked potty-paper for the Elitists.

America's timbering giants have known this was coming for years, have added to their forestland coffers by squeezing out little guy operations, and have taken advantage of "green" credits in order to keep making money as long as possible. Some have allowed themselves to be taken over by investment corporations.

To do otherwise and engage in traditional timbering and manufacturing forest products would have entailed continuous litigation of costly environmental lawsuits filed by environmental attorneys being churned out of the University of Virginia School of Law and other learning institutions.

Now that the Sustainable Development stage has been properly set to sell privately owned millions of forestland acres, deals are being brokered through one of the Nature Conservancy's "unique private-public partnership" deals, such as Governor Granholm's "U. P. Big Deal".

Worse is that our Federal Government also engages in "unique private-public partnership" deals with a little help from the Conservancy. So, when the Senate Finance Committee or IRS investigates the organization, TNC gets a slap on the wrist, an admonition to do better, and a pristinely processed press release, exonerating their questionable financial wheeling and dealing, is issued to the bought and paid for news media, which then totes the good news to the American public.

Remember John Kerry's "global report card", which is internationally graded every five years, and the global plan for the 21st Century, Agenda 21? Certified Sustainable Forests are a part of that plan, as will be fresh and salt waters, agricultural products, textiles, dwellings, and you name it.

Michigan forests have now been dually labeled SFI and FSC certified as globally sustainable by an independent 3rd party certifier, which was mandated to be done by January 1, 2006.

A false market was created years ago for "green" wood and "green" forest products, driving up costs for suppliers and consumers. The world, or so it's claimed, wants only certified "green" forest products, and, by golly, if Home Depot or Lowes doesn't have that in their warehouse, they won't be building new stores on any wetland mud-puddle.

The Sustainable Forestry Board governs the Sustainable Forest Initiative Certification, which our State forests just received. Two Board members are TNC's President and CEO, Steve McCormick, and George Fenwick who founded the American Bird Conservancy after spending 16 years with TNC as VP for Science, VP for Ecosystem Conservation, and Chair of TNC's "Last Great Places" Campaign Steering Committee. The Board uses Ann Arbor based NSF International Strategic Registrations as its acceptable 3rd party certifier.

The Forest Stewardship Council requires stronger compliance mandates than SFI. In their January 2002 newsletter, the Forest Stewardship Council announced that the Nature Conservancy had joined their membership that also includes the National Wildlife Federation, of which MUCC is an affiliated member, the Sierra Club, and others. One of FSC's 3rd party certifiers is NSF International Strategic Registrations of Ann Arbor.

According to the August 11, 2005 Natural Resources Commission meeting minutes, Lynne Boyd, MI-DNR reported that:

"Forest certification is review of the on-ground forest practices against standards that address environmental, social and economic issues. It provides for an independent, third party review of how effectively these practices are carried out; and a periodic re-verification and recertification after the initial certification. Once certified, audits will be continual. The Legislature requires Michigan to be certified by one independent auditing group. Governor Granholm committed for dual certification. The Sustainable Forestry Initiative and the Forest Stewardship Council will be utilized for certification. She stated that FSI is an industry driven standard that originated in the US and looks at forest management practices. The FSC was an international standard that originated in third-world countries looking more at social aspects of managing forest and land."

The 3rd Party Certifier retained by the State to audit our forests for good management practices and 100-year sustainability was NSF Strategic International Registrations, which presented SFI and FSC Certificates to the State during a recent meeting of the Natural Resources Commission in Muskegon.

NSF Strategic International Registrations is a subsidiary of NSF International, an independent, not-for-profit organization and also the UN's World Health Organization Collaborating Centre for Food and Water Safety and Indoor Environment.

Additional NSF International services include safety audits for food and water industries, management systems registrations delivered through NSF Internal Strategic Registrations, Ltd., organic certification provided by Quality Assurance International, and education through the NSF Center for Public Health Education. It was founded in 1944, and is headquartered in Ann Arbor.

So, congratulations, fellow Michiganders, our forests have met the mark according to current SCI and FSC Sustainable Seal of Approval mandates. They join neighboring and dually certified MN and WI State Forests, designated World Heritage Sites, American Heritage Rivers, National Heritage Sites, National Heritage Scenic Highways, etc., all generally within designated UN Biospheres and the thousands of miles-wide buffering Reserves, all managed according to the U.N.'s Agenda 21 mandates.

Our nation's richest resources; the forests, waters, and all that lies far underground, like the world's richest source of native copper in TNC's Keweenaw Peninsula "Last Great Place" and the oil and gas reserves under Lower Michigan's UN Biosphere, are only some of the really "pristine jewels" often referred to in TNC's literature or toted to every Tom, Dick, and Harry willing to listen, including many of those whom we've elected to serve us, and not the global community. ~ CJ

CHALLENGING AN FBI FISHING EXPEDITION

The Yahoo search engine has already given information to the FBI. Google is holding out to the bitter end.

The FBI is demanding that the search engines release the email addresses and other identifying information on those who had searched for child porn. Cracking down on perverts is always a welcomed action, especially when the action cleans the streets of the mentally sick perverts who find pleasure in victimizing children or supporting a market that reaps rewards at the expense of the mental and physical health of kids.

We may very well remain quite offended by the 46 million children killed by abortion since the USSC decision Roe Vs. Wade, but we should also be stricken ill at the thought of predators searching the net for connections with children, child pornography and allowing their perversions to dominate their souls.

However, the FBI is throwing out the net to catch the perverts by a methodology that should raise a concern among all Americans. Rather than obtaining a warrant to obtain specific information about a specific person or visits to a specific web site, the FBI is on a fishing expedition hoping to improve their job security.

We recall the prosecutor in Florida that ran around looking at medical records and pharmacy records of Rush Limbaugh. In a rabid attempt to charge Rush with a crime, they stepped on the both the civil and constitutional rights of the rightwing talk show host.

What comes into question is the expectation of privacy. As an American citizen, do you have an expectation of privacy when you use your telephone, cell phone, internet or even your cable box to watch television? Most would have a resounding affirmative response. Tossing out probable cause in favor of Gestapo tactics is an unacceptable practice.

This reminds us of an elderly couple touring innocently through the highways and byways of Florida, who just happened to overhear a cellular call between Newt Gingrich and another person on their receiver and accidentally recorded the call. They later sold the tape.

As Americans, most of us have a unique understanding of our government's necessary function to keep us safe and by using technology to monitor telephone calls from the suspect regions overseas that are home to many terrorists. At home, terrorists in the U. S. had purchased hundreds of pre-paid cell phones. With the speed of a machine gun the terrorist use one phone and toss it. The NSA was probably beside themselves trying to keep up with the state-side terrorists who were speaking with those overseas. We also know that pre-paid phones don't have any subscriber information to provide them with warrant information. The FBI on-the-other-hand, has no such exigent circumstance.
